Red Army, Polish Troops Cross Neisse

LONDON, April 19 (UP).—The Soviet High Command announced tonight for the first time that its armies were storming Berlin's approaches on a 150-mile front.

[Forst, Weisswasser and Rothenburg, whose capture was announced in the Soviet communique, are a short jump east of Leipzig, Germany's fifth city, which was taken yesterday by U. S. First Army troops. See story page 2.]

Soviet confirmation of the offensive, that enemy sources have been detailing for four days, came in a communique broadcast by the Moscow radio more than an hour after the usual time.

It announced that Soviet and Polish forces had crossed the Neisse on a broad front and captured the west bank fortress of Forst, 58 miles southeast of Berlin, and Weisswasser and Rothenburg 15 and 31 miles south of Forst. The Germans had acknowledged the loss of all three.

Immediately before Berlin, the Soviets established and enlarged a bridgehead across the Oder west of Kuestrin, the communique said. Both German and unofficial Moscow sources have reported the Red Army well entrenched west of the Oder in the Kuestrin sector for some time.

THREE-DAY BATTLE

The battles for the Neisse and Oder bridgeheads have been under way for three days, the communique said, and were the outgrowth of "active patroling" along the streams.

Earlier confirmation of the Berlin drive came in a Warsaw radio announcement that a Polish army had gone into action with the Red Army "in the great offensive on Berlin"

German accounts said the Red Army had captured three forts in Berlin's defense ring and was attacking positions only nine miles from the city limits. Soviet flanking forces south of Berlin were said to have swept 32 miles, stormed across Berlin's river, the Spree, and moved within 25 miles of Dresden.

The Germans said that, spearheaded by the famous First and Second Guard Tank Armies, the Soviets were attacking with an unprecedented concentration of artillery, armor and manpower along a siege front of 60 miles before Berlin. One spearhead of the Second Guard Army was reported storming the approaches of Strausberg, nine miles east of the city limits, after capturing the ruins of Wriezen, 14 miles to the northeast.

Yanks Liquidate Ruhr Pocket

PARIS, April 19 (UP) .- American troops captured Leipzig and Halle today, won most of Nuernberg, northern gateway to the Nazi redoubt, and crushed the last enemy resistance in the Ruhr where 316,930 Soviets Find Huge prisoners were taken in 18 days.

The fall of Leipzig and Halle to Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' U.S. 1st Army after hard street battles collapsed the western side of the Nazi corridor between the Americans and Soviets south of Berlin. It left the Germans in possession of only 19 of the Reich's 58 cities of over 100,000 population, 10 of which are either encircled or under artillery fire.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's U. S. 7th Army pushed the German defenders of Nuernberg into a small pocket and sent an armored spearhead rushing 19 miles southeast of the city to within 31 miles of the headwaters of the Danube and 134 miles of Berchtesgaden. The American broadcasting station in Europe reprted that Nuernberg had been captured.

Approximately 1,000 Hitler youths and officer school candidates, led by 20 to 25 tanks, partially turned the northern flank of Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's U. S. 9th Army northwest of Magdeburg in what a spokesman said was a counter-attack of no serious consequence.

Suppose for a moment that a dispatch were to be flashed to America of a report that the Russians had put Germans in charge of those Americans recently liberated from Nazi prisons. Suppose the report went on farther to state that these Germans had used this strangely-given authority mercilessly to beat the Americans.

Yesterday we were treated to a dispatch from London via United Press containing a report by the News Chronicle that Germans had been put in charge of Russian prisoners by the Allied Military Germans had badly beaten Soviet prisoners recently liberated from Nazi camps.

This ill-smelling business took place at Osterwieck, and the News Chronicle rightly says that "it leaves a bad taste in our mouth." The London paper goes on to say of the victims of this eruel and unusual treatment: "These people are our allies. They have suffered terribly in our cause."

There is something rotten, indeed, when an incident of this kind can occur. We cannot, of course, make a general accusation on this matter as to how far such practices have been carried. But the American people can certainly demand an immediate and root-reaching investigation. They can feel a righteous anger at this maltreatment of our loyal allies, permitted to be given by the hands of our enemies. They will decidedly insist: "This outrage must stop."

Since the war, Weatherman Stapowich told me, the work of the bureau has increased, but lots of its data are of necessity secret.

While we were talking, a girl came up to the roof with a small whitish box, attached to a balloon about eight feet in circumference. He looked skyward then and said: "We'd better get inside, it's going to rain." I looked up too. It don't look like rain to me. "How'dye know?" I demanded. Stimson was asked at his press conference whether American soldiers had been indoctrinated on what to do if they found Hitler. He said he wondered if the question did full justice to American troops. We are all fighting as Allies against the Nazis and every step taken toward their complete defeat should be a matter of mutual congratulations" . . . Stimson disclosed that British and U. The success of the charter will largely depend on the defeat of both the Romneys and Lewis-Trotskyite-Socialist groups within labor ranks.

Results will largely depend not only on resolutions of support but on speedy practical steps to put the charter into life in plants and communities.

Hoover Against the Peace

ET'S STOP kidding ourselves. Ex-President Herbert Hoover is determined to climax his career of disservice to his country by wrecking the San Francisco conference.

Herbert Hoover is an enemy of the peace because he seeks to destroy the indivisible foundation which will make it possible, because he seeks to undermine the unity of the Big Three.

Since 1917 Herbert Hoover has had one touchstonestubborn, unyielding hatred of the Soviet Union. In the 27 years that have followed, Hoover has forgotten nothing, forgiven nothing, learned nothing.

When Hoover was President of the United States, he refused to recognize the Soviet Union. At the moment when this war attained its full proportions as a people's war-when the Soviet Union was attacked by the Nazis-Hoover joined a group of other bitter-end Republicans, including John L. Lewis, in proclaiming that it was no longer a democratic war. The Soviet Union was outside Hoover's pale. Let the Nazis dismember it.

Hoover never abandoned this position.

An Associated Press dispatch dated April 18, 1945, quotes Hoover as saying that "if we had not been anxious to protect the political rights and freedom of Great Britain we would not have been forced into war in Europe." And, he says, we are fighting Japan "to protect the political rights and independence of China."

Blind to Facts

Hoover is at least consistent. If he never recognized the Soviet Union, he also never acknowledged that the Japanese launched a fateful attack on a certain Sunday on a certain American island base in the Pacific.

If he never recognized that the American people must fight this war, he does not acknowledge even today that it is being won in any real sense. In his Philadelphia speech last Tuesday, Hoover said:

'As the result of this war the area of human freedom will shrink by whole nations. It is shrinking in many

Just imagine. All of Europe is being liberated from the Nazi yoke, from the hated Gestapo, from fearful torture and suppression. And Herbert Hoover, the sage of Palo Alto, says the area of human freedom is shrinking.

What does he mean by this? He means that whole nations are moving towards genuine democracy. He means that the Soviet Union, instead of being destroyed by the Nazis, is today a great world power linked in insoluble friendship with the United States.

What He Proposes

To all this Herbert Hoover has not reconciled himself.

and he proposes to do something about it.

The main objective of what he proposes to do he stated in his Philadelphia speech. He insists that "the survival of Western civilization . . . depends upon unity in certain principles common to Britain, France and the other democracies." He wants unity exclusive of the Soviet Union, in effect unity against the Soviet Union, a revival of the ill-fated cordon sanitaire.

It is only against this background that Hoover's amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks plan can be properly understood. Hoover proposes that propaganda be considered as aggression so that the old charges of Soviet infiltration abroad can again become a matter of heated and dangerous controversy. He proposes that political decisions made now be kept tentative and reviewed periodically so that the march of events in Europe can still be upset at some time in the future.

And yet, with the exception of the Daily Worker, no influential voice has been raised in this country against this latest flowering of Hooverism. Neither liberal nor conservative papers have exposed Hoover's attack on the PM has consistently shied away from this issue. It devoted only a few lines of a non-committal United Press story to his Philadelphia speech.

Here is a double threat to San Francisco: the ingenious amendments of Hoover supported within the American delegation by Sen. Vandenberg and the indifference to the danger of these proposals by decisive sections of public Americans are now dedicating themselves with a new reverence to the cause of international cooperation which Franklin D. Roosevelt championed. But it is not enough to wage a battle of generalities. It is necessary to fight for the real substance of the Roosevelt policies.

When will America speak up on the threat of Hooverism?

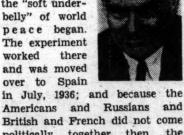

To Tell the Truth

Red River Coyote

WHEN General Eisenhower of Texas and Marshal Zhukov of Russia come together at Berlin, the worldwide forces they represent will have been 10 years on the way to this meeting.

For the character of the war that brings them together was determined down in Africa at the Ethiopian village of Adowa in 1935

Mussolini's troops marched in and the assault on the "soft underbelly" of world peace began. The experiment worked and was moved over to Spain

Americans and Russians and British and French did not come politically together then, the bloodiest war of all time and the odyssey of 10 million Americans across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans had to be. The military forces commanded by Zhukov and Eisenhower—the field since time began-are no more than the GI's of 2,000 million women and children and men of this globe. While they turn their guns together upon Berlin, the governmental representatives of the 2,000 million will meet in San Francisco.

Can the civilian representatives of the United States and Russia agree at San Francisco and, by the dynamic force of their agreement, make possible the fusing of a half a hundred other nations in world-wide concord?

Yes, agreement can be reached by the United States and Russia. Why? Because what the isolationist press puts forward as "the American position" is not the American position at all. It is a synthetic arrangement of the interests of a dozen small, middle-sized and large, ill-ventilated groups extending from the hetel rooms of those Polish politicians in London who admit habitual communication with secret groups behind the lines of the Allied armies, to the newspapers in Chicago and New York who are now furiously thundering the propaganda of the Nazi government newspapers closed down by the Allied armies in western and southern Germany.

The so-called issues between the United States and Russia are: (1) Poland, (2) voting procedure, authority and representation in the Security Council and Assembly of the proposed international organization, and (3) interpretation of the Atlantic Charter on territorial changes.

What the isolationist newspapers call "the American position" on each of these questions is about as follows:

That a government be imposed upon Poland that would maintain at Warsaw a point of political support for the gathering of all the forces in the world that plan a renewed struggle against Russia. But is this an "American" interest? No. It is an interest of those forces which are most antagonistic to every interest of the United States.

Second, that the decisive voting power and authority of the two largest powers, the United States and Russia, shall be reduced and made to some degree vulnerable to any future alignment of states within the coming international organization against the largest industrial and creditor nation, the United States, and against the largest of the anti-feudal forces of Europe and Asia, Soviet Russia.

Third, that the Atlantic Ch be construed to mean that textitorial questions are to be settled in such manner as to enable a reconstruction of a future Japanese line of bases in the Pacific Ocean, and the elements of a future anti-Russia military strategic line across Europe.

Where does "the American interest" require that the United States should support proposals that would subject both our country and the ally most essential to our military, political and economic position be made the object of a future political raid like that which Clemenceau succeeded in making against Woodrow Wilson's more or less good intentions at Versailles?

T REMINDS me of a story that I heard as a child on my uncle Joe Houston's ranch in the Red River valley not far, as Texas distances go, from where Ike Eisenby Robert Minor hower was born. It is about a coyote whose life was made miserable by fleas.

You may know that the coyotes of the Red River country are reputed to have wisdom of the wolf and the fox. When his fleas became unbearable, this coyote went down to the bank of the Red River, picked up a piece of driftwood, held one end of it in his teeth, and waded out. The fleas that found themselves getting wet on the coyote's legs, crawled up to his body. He went in deeper, and they climbed to his back. Then the wise fellow slowly sank his body further into the water, and the fleas crawled to the top of his head to keep dry. Then the coyote sank himself deeper until the top of his head was under water, and the fleas all ran up and accumulated on his nose. But the coyote sank deeper until his nose was under water, and the fleas all ran of his nose on to the little stick of wood to keep dry. Then the coyote let loose the stick of wood, dived and swam ashore, while the stick of wood floated down the Red River with all the fleas aboard.

The life and death necessity for the United States is to get these fleas of pretended "American" interest-really most damaging to every American interest-out of our hair.

PPROPRIATELY the list of signers of a document in the New York Times yesterday, directed to sabotage of the San Francisco conference, is headed by George S. Sokolsky who happens to be the author of the classic formulation of the real program of the fleas, published in the New York Sun Oct 9, 1940:

'It is preferable to go down to defeat than to be victorious as the little ally of the Russian Brute. It is preferable to suffer the agonies of a prolonged world war than to accept peace as a bounty from Stalin."

Let the fleas accumulate on this program. And then dive, Uncle Coyote, so that you may thrive in peace for many genrations.

Worth Repeating

LABOR'S RESPONSIBILITY for success at San Francisco is stressed by James Allen in the concluding words of his article in the current (April) Political Affairs, in which he says in part: The new world labor organization is a powerful instrument for bringing about world unity of action. American labor has a major share of the responsibility; for it is in this country that formidable forces operate to swing our country away from the course of world cooperation.

A Warm Welcome in Browder's Home State

WE FELT when leaving Kansas City that the very peak of our tour had been reached. Old friends of Earl Browder's family joined the Communist Political Association inspired by the strength of his book Teheran and many of his pamphlets, America's Decisive Battle were sold to the interested audience. I told them when they finished reading that book they would surely swell with pride to remember that Earl Browder, the honored president of the National Communist Political Association was their very own "landsman." At that meeting, 10 new members were initiated with an earnest, sacred pledge to do everything in their power against "defeatism," "the main instrument of fascism." Some of the men who were active in the old Socialist Party during the first World War, took that pledge in Kansas City.

In St. Louis the night before I left to go to Kansas City, 60 new members stood before me, 50 who had joined in the last quarter and the 10 who joined at a great, enlarged membership meeting of all the clubs-five of them in St. Louis. In nearly all the meetings of the clubs so far on my trip, the brunt of the work falls upon the shoulders of our brave women, old and young.

by Mother Bloor

AND then we landed in Denver. The first night, a big audience in their new attractive headquarters. Here we sold every copy on hand of Earl's pamphlet. (Notice to the publisher: "Speed up the sending of the quota" taken by each club or we shall run over that quota now, today.) The day I arrived in Denver, April 6, Paul Robeson was having a fine luncheon rally but I couldn't get there in time.

The next morning we had a real visit with him around noon. In my hotel room with us, an old-timer who changed from being an anarchist to become a useful member of the Communist Political Association when I recruited him, now promoted to official activities in the CPA, was present with his wife and daughter and an interested grandson of 14. The boy's mother brought a CPA application card with her, which she wanted me to sign as sponsor. I gave her the same "initiation" the other new members had the day before, not a "standard" one, but a special one for this young mother. Then the group including Robeson all rose, making her realize the great responsibility and joy she was accepting. Wasn't that a beautiful service for a bright Sunday morning in Denver?

YOUNG folks who accompanied me to the train to Salt Lake City, told me that the new recruits were still "coming in." That was the best inspiration to take with me on the ride through the great old Rockies. Looking back at the group gathered at the station including the same group described in the morning with the exception of Paul, who, old trouper, as he is, had gone another direction on another train. Besides the familiar faces there were soldiers from the nearby camps and two bright active WACS. I must say right here, their faces were familiar too from a far-off state.

I have just arrived in Salt Lake City. A young woman secretary met me at the station in a driving cold snowstorm at 7 o'clock. She had driven in from her farm home 17 miles away to meet me. All day I have been "receiving." Guests included two newspaper reporters, one brave minister and his wife. The clergyman will be chairman at a dinner tonight. The snow has stopped, the sun is shining a little and I am ready for the dinner, ready to get new members here—to get new readers for Earl Browder's brilliant interpretation of Teheran and all that follows and also all primed to get new readers of The Worker. I am feeling fit, just as Paul Robeson today is stronger and better than ever before because of his "great faith in the new world a'coming" and the chance to work for it. So do we all grow in our faith and in our work.

P.S.—The Salt Lake City dinner was a success. The dinner brought together the oldtimers and a number of new members, mostly young people. Looking forward to the mass meeting tonight, then starting off to Los

Let's Face It

WALTER LIPPMANN, Herald Tribune columnist who broke with his paper's position to back FDR in the last elections, wrote a very comforting column about President Truman the other day, perhaps just a wee bit too comforting in one respect.

Lippmann's thesis, among other thing, was

(1) that the Democratic convention, when it chose Harry S. Truman as vicepresidential cendidate last summer, knew it was picking the next President and hence, picked a man whose convictions about FDR's "great policies" had been well tested and whose capacity for uniting men well proved; and (2) that Truman could get those "great policies" accepted because the issue was no longer "surcharged with the intense personal feelings" aroused by President Roosevelt.

I do not think there can be much doubt about that fact that FDR himself, supertactician that he was, thought along the lines indicated in Lippmann's first point. That probably accounts for his failure to take a firmer position on behalf of the renomination of Henry Wallace.

Whether the convention as a whole was consciously thinking along those lines seems to me debatable. Underlying the conflicting motives that finally resulted in Truman's nomination, however, the factors mentioned by Lippmann unquestionably dominated.

First, Truman's position regarding the

by Max Gordon

Roosevelt policies had been thoroughly tested. No man could have been nominated by that convention who was not a devoted supporter of those policies. Truman was by no means a "compromise" candidate in the sense of compromising between conflicting political views. The anti-FDR forces were far too weak to require any such compromise. If Truman was more acceptable to the reactionary sections of the party than Wallace, it was because they wanted a token victory over Wallace who symbolized all they hated, and Truman's nomination gave them that token victory.

THEY, however, were not the reason for Truman's victory. He won because he had the support of the "regular," or machine, Democrats. And he had that support because he was in the rather peculiar position of being a product of machine politics and at the same time a tested backer of FDR's program who had made important contributions to the execution of that program.

That fact, plus his personal characteristics. made it possible for him to second the President's role as unifier of the party probably to a greater degree than any other individual. Hence, Lippmann is right when he says that Truman was no "political accident."

That is no small matter. Truman is now the titular head of the Democratic Party and that party remains the core of any popular coalition behind his program, as well as the backbone of his support in Congress.

As regards Lippmann's second point, there is bound to be some relief from the hysterical

Truman's Policies Face A Tough Fight

Roosevelt-phobes and that will unquestionably be of some help in putting the Roosevelt-Truman policies across. I'm afraid, though, that Lippmann may be putting a bit too much weight on the personal aspects of the struggle. Let's remember that the source of the bitter hatred of Roosevelt was his program and not his personality. The proper approach does, of course, help to mitigate opposition, but no one can charge Roosevelt with having been a poor tactician.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, at his press conference, outlined five specific congressional issues around which a struggle is now being waged in Congress. These are Bretton Woods, the reciprocal trade treaties, the Missouri Valley Authority, the permanent FEPC and the anti-polltax measure. Examine them all and you will see he has a tough fight on his hands in every case.

The Bretton Woods issue must get through a House committee which at this moment is hostile to it though there are rumors of a possible compromise. The reciprocal trade treaties program is meeting the opposition of the entire GOP caucus in the House Ways and Means Committee. The MVA is before the Senate Commerce Committee, which is determined to kill it. And we know what to expect when FEPC and the anti-polltax measure get to the Senate.

I am afraid that these issues will not be decided merely through the elimination of the intense personal feelings aroused by FDR. As was the case when FDR was President, intense popular feeling aroused by the issues themselves will be needed to get them through.

HOSPITAL care is part of the treatment of illness. But "modern programs of hospital construction should have as their aim the ample provision of a more inclusive type of hospital service . . . a medical center which combines and coordinates the three major aspects of modern medical care—the preventive, the diagnostic, and the therapeutic serv-

Hospital facilities in the United States, with the exception of certain university centers, do not fulfill this purpose. Today they are centers for treatment of disease. The conception of a modern medical institute is changing. It must be more than a building which provides a bed, a nurse, a doctor, food and an operating room. According to the Interim Report of the Senate Sub-committee on Wartime Health and Education and health, future hospital construction must be planned. Health centers, rural hospitals, district hospitals and state hospitals should be part of a network covering every state where "every person, regardless of where he lived, might receive (a) immediate diagnosis care for the common, relatively simple ailments and (b) easy access when necessary to the more complicated types of medical service." You can find that in the committee's January, 1945 report. Sen. Claude Pepper (D-Fla) heads the subcommittee.

Such an overall pattern of facilities must not only be planned, but paid for. According to Dr. Parran, Surgeon General of the United States, 40 per cent of the counties in this country, with a population of 15,000,000, have no registered hospital.

TO AID them and to develop the concept of planned medical facilities, a bill is now pending in the Senate, S.191, which provides money both for planning such construction and for building it. The Hill-Burton Bill, or "Hospital Construction Act" provides $5,000,-000 for planning, and $100,000,000 for building necessary facilities on the basis of approved plans submitted by the states. Such sums or more are to be made available each year if any states remain with plans not yet approved.

The Hill-Burton Bill for hospital construction is the first legislative proposal growing out of the Pepper Committee's investigations. It goes to the root of the problem. Welltrained physicians will not settle in an area without a hospital. They cannot practice modern medicine without the use of hospital and diagnostic facilities. This is a determining factor in the maldistribution of doctors throughout the country. A report of the U.S. Public Health Service shows that there were 60 per cent fewer doctors in counties which had no hospitals, where the per capita income was less than $300.

EMPHASIS in the Hill-Burton Bill is on planning. To receive funds from the bill, each state must designate an agency for planning a comprehensive program; it shall designate a State Advisory Council; it shall draw up a plan in accordance with prescribed standards and shall make such reports as the Surgeon General may require.

To receive money for construction, the state plan must designate an agency to carry it out with full authority; must draw up a hospital construction program 'to provide the necessary physical facilities for furnishing adequate hospital, clinic and similar services to all the people of the State," state the relative need for the various projects under consideration, and outline methods of administration.

Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., has expressed his gratification that Americans are responding generously to the nationwide clothing appeal for overseas tion.

"It is heartening to learn that thousands of our citizens have already shared those things which they can spare with others whose need is so great," Stettinius said.

Clothing collections have been organized on Indian Reservations under the direction of the Office of Indian Affairs, Mr. Kaiser stated, and reports indicate that many blankets, which are critically needed in wartorn lands, are being contributed.

What's Baseball's Rush To Get New Commissioner?

By Nat Low

The "grass roots" movement to name Ed Barrow commissioner of baseball has been squelched by Barrow himself and that really is unusual when you think of the hundreds of people who are leaving not a stone unturned to get the soft job. It's remarkable how much fuss is being made over this business of finding a replacement for the late Judge Landis.

Almost daily the sports pages carry long and solemn stories about the dire necessity of naming a commissioner immediately. Why is baseball in such a dither about this? You'd think the game was in some terrible fix and needed immediate rescue.

Frankly, I don't understand it. Baseball is more strongly rooted in our way of life than it ever was. It is threatened by no such scandal as the "Black Sox" affair that brought Judge Landis into the picture.

Maybe you can tell me, I'm confused. . But I can say that they doth protest too much and that's not a good sign.

In Henry Armstrong's USO troupe that has arrived safely in the China-Burma-India theater to entertain the troops is none other than Joe Lillard, Oregon All-American football star, the last Negro to play in the professional football league and most recently sports director at Camp Unity. With Armstrong and Lillard are Kenny Washington, Bill Yancey and sports writer Dan Burley. The boys will be back in two months.

Pat Kennedy, the apoplectic basketball official who is so well known to Garden cage fans, is now a baseball umpire in the International League. Actually this is Kennedy's third year as a baseball ump but in his first year he broke a leg and was forced out for the season and last year suffered from high blood pressure and was forced to sit out that one, too.

The New York Post is the latest paper to join in the campaign to end baseball's Jimcrow. Wednesday's paper carried a big story by Stanley Frank who used to be the Post's sports columnist but now is their ace feature writer. Frank took Branch Rickey and the Dodgers to task for not signing Terris McDuffle after the West Point tryout. . . Yesterday the Post had an editorial that demanded the end of baseball's Jimcrow

And I wonder why PM's Joe Cummiskey, who has heretofore been so active in the campaign, has been so strangely quiet these days when everybody should be pulling together. Whattya know, Joe?

row over the Red Sox at the Stadium yesterday, winning 4 to 3 errors made the victory possible. With the score tied 3-3 as the Yanks went to the plate in the ninth, Stirnweiss opened with a single to left. Metheny bunted a pop fly that catcher Bob Walters purposely let fall in order to try for a double play, but his throw to second was wild, Stirnweiss going to third and Metheny to second. Russ Derry was purposely passed and then pitcher Mike Ryba hit Johnny Lindell on the left hand, forcing in the winning run.

Story of Generals In the White House

ENERALS IN THE WHITE HOUSE, by Dorothy Burne Goebel and Julius Goebel, Jr.; Doubleday, Doran and Co., New York, 1948, 276 pp., $2.75.

By LOUIS F. BUDENZ

WITH the genius dead who has led American democracy so brilliantly, there may be new misgivings among some people that a dictator-mad "man on horseback" will ride into the White House in 1948.

As if to anticipate such a fear, a book has recently been issued which is reassuring on this point. America's past experience with military men in the White House, it sets out to show, has not been a dread one. The chief difficulty, apparently, with these gentlemen has been that too many of them have been mediocrities.

Of our 32 Presidents, nine have been generals and four have been in military service in some rank. But when we examine the names we observe that only a couple can be called professional soldiers.

generals," men from other walks of life who have earned glory or at least distinction in one of our wars. Most of the American people will be surprised to learn that Benjamin Harrison, that obscure President sandwiched between the two Grover Cleveland administrations, was the last general in the White House. Few knew that he was a general at all.

Men in Uniform

It was scarcely necesary to write a book to prove that generals in America need not be despots. The man with a military title who becomes chief executive is not merely progressive or reactionary because of his uniform. He is the representative of certain interests within the nation. A man in a tailor-made suit might be more dangerous, under certain circumstances.

The serious feature of the proposed candidacy of Gen. Douglas MacArthur did not arise from his being a military man. It came from the use which was being made of his name by special interests to assail President Roosevelt and his aims.

It is this political reality which the authors of Generals in the White House overlook almost altogether, and that puts a definite bad mark upon their work. There is no standard by which to measure the men in the White House whom they are studying, because by and large they are studied merely as individuals and not as the spokesmen and products of certain driving forces within the nation. Why Washington and Jackson can be saviors of the nation and Hays and Harrison prove to be breaks upon its progress is not told at all.

Pierce As President

This is regrettable when we consider that the authors have brought a certain pleasant style to the treatment of this subject. The recounting of certain items of past American history is also very interesting in itself. Such is the story of Franklin Pierce.

To that story the authors do more justice than to most of the CIRCUS

Herbert Hoover of his day, who as ex-President was as savagely to serve the Slave Power as Hoover has sought to help along Munichism. Pierce was a puny general and a poor President. Here again the authors, full of sarcasm for the "country lawyer" from New Hampshire, fail to bring out that his Achilles heel historically was his servile adhesion to the Slave Power.

Then, too, the book dwells upon "the evil of a standing army" in such a continuous and solicitous tone almost to discourage the possibilities of democratic military service in the post-war period. It's too much an abstract militarism upon which the authors dwell, and on that account much of the value of the subject they bring forward is lost. They may, however, encourage some folks with better yardsticks to write up the theme again.

Stabilizer Davis Okays Textile Pay Boost

WASHINGTON, April 19 (UP).—Stabilization Director William H. Davis today approved the upward wage adjustments ordered by the War Labor Board for about 50,000 textile workers employed by 54 northern and southern mills.

This makes effective a minimum rate of 55 cents an hour and an increase of five cents an hour for those making above the minimum. The increases were voted by WLB two months ago.

Davis tied his decision to the necessity of producing textiles to hold down the cost of living. An immediate and substantial increase in the total production of textiles is of supreme importance to the stabilization program, he said.

NO OIL FOR GERMANY

THE unprecedented bag of German war planes destroyed ON THE GROUND by the Allied air forces during the last month or so is obviously a direct result of the dearth of oil in Germany. The planes cannot afford to go aloft. At least the planes attached to the troops of the Western Front (German planes in the east continue to fly; only on April 16 98 of them were shot out of the air by Russian fliers and flak).

In this connection, the headline in Thursday's N. Y. Times is noteworthy. It says: "Reich Gas Output Is Cut 96 Percent by Bombs." Please note the words "by bombs." This, of course, is absolute nonsense, because the main cause of Germany's shortage of gas today is the fact that the Red Army chose to make its great march from Grozny in the Caucasus to Zistersdorf near Vienna. Along this 1,750-mile route the Red Army swept up practically all the oil-producing centers which were available to the enemy, from the fields of Maikop in the Kuban district of the Caucasus to the smallish oil fields of Zistersdorf in the Thaya River valley northeast of Vienna. So why say that "bombs" did it? It was done by ground troops taking physical possession of the oil derricks.

Furthermore, the N. Y. Times seems to be placing its own interpretation on the causes of the German lack of oil, while at the same time relaying a statement by "a high officer of the Army Air Forces." The impression is created that it is this "high officer" who credited the bombings with cutting German oil 96 percent (who, O Lord, counted the percentage?). The "high officer," as a matter of fact, said: "About 95 percent of Germany's crude oil and 75 percent of her synthetic oil refineries have been lost BY CAPTURE" (our emphasis-V. C.).

This is being said not in the spirit of sniping to set these things straight at a time when the "air-power-alone" boys, discredited by the irrefutable facts of war, will attempt to stage a comeback on the strength of trumped-up evidence. These men are not only fanatics of a phony idea. They are also subconsciously fascist-minded. Just as fascist-minded as all military theoreticians who advocated and still advocate the almost exclusive use of one arm in war. All these Douhets, Fullers, "de" Severskys, etc., basically do not wish to see the masses of the people armed. They want a select and highly trained group of men, politically "filtered," armed to the teeth with highly specialized weapons (such men as "de" Seversky may also have other, more commercial motives) holding sway over the despised masses of the people and imposing their will on them with small expenditure of blood and

Let me assure you that at this very moment certain groups of reactionaries, scared stiff by the specter of real or imagined revolutionary movements in a Europe and an Asia plowed up and harrowed by war, are already thinking of an American Super-Air Force which will be able to impose a sort of Pax Americana on the entire world. Pax Americana ex aere imposita. Our Latin is probably wrong again, but the idea is real. And a very dangerous idea it is to entertain on the eve of San Francisco and of the building of the foundations of a just and lasting peace. If you read "de" Seversky's Victory Through Air Power, you will feel the idea of Pax American imposed from the air trickling between many of the lines.

The time has now come for the checking of the real role of air power in this war. Our troops are on the scene and can see for themselves what bombs have done. The prolonged Nazi resistance shows that nothing could have been achieved if we had not gone out to dig the Germans out with bayonets and hand grenades.

This is why the "boys" will try to juggle figures and distort the meaning of factual reports to ir crumbling aerial "castle in For, basically, they want two things: (1) sell a lot of planes after the war and (2) try to kid America into believing that she can be the sole arbiter of "justice" by means of a long-range bombing force.
